Born in 1979 in Bucharest, Romania, Arch. Ion-Serban Patrulius founded “Patrulius și Asociații” in 2007, an office dedicated to architectural planning, interior design and urbanism, where his local and international experience would serve as a basis for his future endeavors and projects. Serban graduated from the Karlsruhe Institute of Technology, Germany. During and after completing his studies, he has worked for several European architecture firms in Germany, France and Romania.

He has tackled projects that include public buildings and spaces such as retail, hospitality, offices, transportation, health, spas, restaurants, bank branches along with residential developments and contemporary insertions in historic protected areas, for corporate clients such as Telekom, Volksbank, Nokia, NCH Capital, other significant companies and for local councils of Romanian cities. For most of the projects, the design services spanned from the first sketch to the completion of the buildings.

As the lead architect of “Patrulius și Asociații”, Serban has won two urban design competitions in Bucharest: in 2016 “Cotroceni Smart City” – a mixed use and residential development of a 43,000 square meters plot, and in 2020 “Reclaiming the River” - a revitalizing concept for a section of the Dâmbovița river front.
